FOREWORD

THERE has been much pleasure in compiling this little book, and I hope that it may be helpful to many men and women of the name of Kittredge, who feel that they would like to know something of the grandfathers who have gone before them.

The medical tradition is, of course, the most outstanding feature of the family; there are sixty-six Doctors of Medicine mentioned in this book, and there were probably others, who have been omitted. In one branch of the family, there have been nine Dr. Kittredges in direct succession, straight down from the first John.

Much care has been taken to avoid mistakes, but the author is sure that some must have crept in. A great deal of the information has been collected from the published Vital Records, but some has come from old Town Histories, which are known to be unreliable in some cases. The living members of the family have been most kind in assisting to bring the various lines up to date. I wish especially to express my thanks to Mrs. Nettie L. Kittredge of Rochester, N. Y., for lending me the very valuable notes which her husband, the Rev. Josiah Edward Kittredge, had made during his life. Also Miss Dora Hodgdon, Librarian of the State Library at Montpelier, Vermont, was helpful in lending her assistance. Other members of the family, who have been most kind with their criticism and encouragement, are Mr. George W. Kittredge of Yonkers, N. Y.; Mr. S. Dana Kittredge of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Professor George Lyman Kittredge of Cambridge, Mass.; Mr. Edward Holmes Kittredge of Arlington, Mass.; Dr. Herman Eugene Kittredge of Washington, D. C.; and many more.

There is a coat-of-arms extant in this country, which is in the name of Kittredge, on which it is spelled Keterige; this is perfectly genuine, and probably belongs to the family, but no reliable evidence has been obtained as to the connection between the family in England and the one in America. John Kittredge came to Billerica, Mass., about 1660, and all the family in America are descended from him, as far as can be gathered. It is probable that he came from Lowestoft, England, as that is the tradition which has come down, and Kittredge was a common name in Lowestoft at that time; also the medical tradition is mentioned in connection with him in the old history of Tewksbury, but so far no distinct mention of his name has been found on the other side of the water, and without that no claim to relationship can be made.

I also wish to express my thanks to Miss Lilian Redstone, of London, England, for her conscientious and original work in looking up the records. She found the names of many Kittredges, which are all to be found here, and we can only hope that what has been done, will be a foundation for others to work on, and so will finally help some one to actually find the link between the families on the two sides of the Atlantic.

THE KITTREDGE FAMILY IN AMERICA

English Notes

WILL of John Kitteridge of Bottisham, Co. Cambridge, inn-holder, made 23 Oct. 1608, proved February 1608-9 at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. He mentions wife Margaret, sons Thomas, Edward and Annanias; daus. Blaunche, Emerye, Margaret, Susan, Agnes More, and 5 grandchildren. (Recorded in Book Dorset, Folio 14.) Extract made by Henry F. Waters, 30 July 1879 at Somerset House, Strand, London.

August 21, 1896, I visited Lowestoft, England, and examined records, tombstones, etc. In "A Historical Account of the Ancient Town of Lowestoft" by Edmund Gillingwater, 1790, page 423, appears the name of John Kitteridge in a list of 18 names subscribing to a fund to build a gun-boat to cost 30,000 pounds, when in 1782 England was involved in a war with France, Spain, Holland and America. The list opens thus: (1) Mr. Walker, for the proprietors of the Lowestoft Porcelain Manufactory, 10 pounds 10 shil. (2) Rev. Mr. Arrow, vicar, 5 pounds, 5 shil. (3) Mr. John Ketteridge, 5 pounds, 5 shil. A note to this third name reads thus: "Arms of Ketteridge. Sable. A Lion rampant, Or. Crest, a mural crown, Gules. A demi-Lion issuing couped, Or and Sable. Motto: Ne pars sincera trahetur." This motto may be translated: Let naught that's good be harmed or corrupted.

I am glad to give you this item from my Lowestoft visit. Signed, J. E. Kittredge.

P.S. There is a doubt, I suppose as to the genuineness of the arms. I was unable to trace them at the Heraldic office in London.

A certain John Kittredge was Bishop of St. David's, Wales, in 1414. He was translated to Litchfield in Coventry in 1415. He had just been appointed Bishop of Exeter in 1419, when he died.

The first we learned of the Kittredges coming to this country, was in 1660, when Captain John Kittredge fled from England to America. Capt. Kittredge was in charge of a ship which plied from England to some foreign port. He had in charge, medical receipts, and being of a surgical turn of mind, he studied them carefully. He began experimenting by breaking animal's limbs; then setting them, seeing how fast he could get them to heal. One of his men broke an arm, and the Captain set it. Soon after this, another man broke a leg, and asked the Captain to set it for him. The Captain said he would, "If he would take a room and place himself entirely in his care"; which he did. He being very successful, it became known to the authorities, and as the laws were very stringent at that time, allowing no one to practice without a medical diploma, it became necessary for him to flee from England and come to this country, where he settled in Billerica, Mass., September 25, 1660.

An early American tradition speaks of the first John Kittredge as coming to this country with his mother, and as being one "on whom the healing art had descended through many generations."

He received a grant of land of five acres in Billerica on Sept. 25, 1660. That part of Billerica where John Kittredge's descendants located was incorporated into the town of Tewksbury, December 23, 1734. Among the forty-six families from Billerica taken into the new town, there were eleven by the name of Kittredge.

JOHN KITTREDGE, EMIGRANT ANCESTOR

1. I. John Kittredge, born probably in Oulton or Lowestoft, England, in 1630. Died at Billerica, Mass., Oct. 18, 1676. He received a grant of land in Billerica, Sept. 25, 1660. Married Mary Littlefield at Wells, Maine, Nov. 2, 1664. She was born Dec. 14, 1646, the daughter of Francis Littlefield and Jane Hill, granddaughter of Ralph Hill. Francis Littlefield lived in Woburn, Mass., but his wife died when Mary was six days old, and then he moved to Wells, Maine.

An interesting relic of a grist-mill of considerable importance to Andover people who lived in the west part of the town, and of profit to its owner, is a petition (dated May 27, 1752) of James Kittredge, of Tewksbury, to the General Court, in which he shows that about twenty-seven years before, he erected a Grist-mill and built a dam across Shawshin River in the part of Billerica afterwards Tewksbury. He says that the people of the neighboring towns, Wilmington and Andover, had "great dependence" on his mill. He states that he has been sued for damage in flowing land, and relates in full his grievances. The petition is signed by citizens of several towns interested in the mill. This is copied from Miss Bailey's History of Andover.

During the French and Indian War, the physicians and surgeons were kept busy, not only those who followed the army into the field, but also those at home; for the wounded and sick soldiers were constantly returning, for treatment, to their own homes, or tarrying at the houses of the surgeons. Witness the following petition:

"These may certify whom it may concern that I, John Kittredge of Andover aforesaid, sometime in the month of August last I saw Lieut. Simon Wade of Medford at the House of my father in Tewksbury which I found in dangerous circumstances by reason of a wound (as he enformed he Received at Fort William Henry in the Late Expedition to Crown Point). My father enformed me that he was doubtful whether he would recover of his wound & to all appearance his wounds looked Incurable. About the term of three weeks (as my Father enformed me) he continued with him, during which time my father enformed me that the canker had taken his sore & it eat to a Great Degree & caused his sore to Bleed half a pint in one night & that he Despaired of his recovery: sometime in the month of Sept'r last Mr. Wade put himself under my care (by reason that my father was labouring under bodily Indisposition) & from s'd month of Sept. to the Day of the Date hereof s'd Wade hath been under my care & for the greatest part of the Time his wound was very Bad. I was obliged to take several pieces of Bone out of his Leg & even now judge him to be quite Incapable of military Duty.

John Kittredge.

Essex, Andover, June 19, 1757."

Will of John Kittredge

In the Name of God Amen, I John Kittredge of Andover in the County of Essex, & Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, Surgeon, being through divine goodness favored with the due exercise of my understanding, have great cause and accordingly I return thanks to Almighty God therefor, but being exercised with such bodily Indisposition gives me reason to think that my continuance in life is but short. I have therefor thought proper to discharge my mind of all Worldly concerns as far as possible to the end I may spend the remainder of my Days in preparation for Futurity, for which purpose I make this my last Will and Testament, whereby I Dispose of my Worldly goods & Estate as followeth Viz—

Imp: I give to my well beloved Wife the one third of all my Lands and Buildings in Andover aforesaid, and the one third of all my Household goods & Furniture to be for Her Use and Improvement, as long as she remains my Widow.

Item: I Give to my son Benjamin Kittredge of Tewksbury in the County of Middlesex, the sum of twenty Shillings Lawful money, and the reason I give no more is that I have given him his portion out of my Estate some time before.

Item: I Give to my son Thomas Kittredge all the land I own lying in a place know by the Name of Ox Common, in said Andover, which with what I have given him my said son Thomas compleats his full proportion of my Estate.

Item: I give to my two sons namely John & Jacob Kittredge all my Lands and Buildings in Andover aforesaid, excepting the Land I gave to my son Thomas aforesaid, which Buildings consist of Dwelling-Houses, Barns, Corn Houses, Grist Mill & Cider Mill, all of every denomination also all my live Stock of Cattle, Horses, Sheep, Swine, and all my Husbandry utensils of every denomination, and all my Tools that may be useful for tending the Mills aforesaid. And also all Bonds and Notes of Hand and Book accounts, together with what Money I may leave at my decease, and my Wareing Apparel I Give the same to my said Sons John & Jacob Kittredge to be equally divided between them. And in consideration of what I have given to my said Sons John & Jacob Kittredge the Executor of this Testament hereinafter named is hereby Ordered to see that all my just Debts and Funeral charges, together with all the Legacies in this will mentioned be paid out of that part of my Estate I have given to my two sons John & Jacob Kittredge, to whom I give each one Beds Beding etc.

Item: It is my Will that if either of my said sons John & Jacob Kittredge should happen to Die without any lawful Heirs of their own, Then the Share of Him who may first decease shall Accrue to the other Survivor & his heirs.

Item: I give to my Granddaughter, Molly White Daughter of Aaron White of Midway in the County of Suffolk, the sum of Fourteen pounds five shillings & twopence Lawful money, and the reason I give her no more is I give my Daughter Mother of the said Molly White at her marriage as much as would make her the said Grandchild with what I have now Bequeathed, equal to my other Daughters, which sum is to be paid her at the Age of twenty one years, but if she should see fit to marry before arriving at that age, the same to be paid her at her marriage.

Item: I Give to my Granddaughter Sarah Dwinnel the sum of Sixty Pounds lawful money to be paid her in the following manner, viz. twenty pounds to be paid her as soon as she arrives to the Age of twenty one years, but if she should see fit to marry before the age of twenty one years, the same sum of twenty Pounds to be paid her, and the Remainder to be paid in three years after she come to the age of twenty one with lawful interest for the same, till paid. And I also order her the said Sarah Dwinnel to be maintained out of that part of my Estate I give to my Sons John & Jacob Kittredge untill she arrive to the age of eighteen years.

Item: I Give to my Daughter Elizabeth Kittredge the Sum of Fifty three Pounds six shillings & eight pence Lawful money, of which sum Thirteen pounds six shillings & eight pence is to be paid her at my Decease and the remainder to be paid her in four years after with lawful Interest for the same till paid.

Item: I Give to my Daughter Hannah Kittredge the sum of Sixty Pounds lawful money, twenty pounds to be paid her when she arives to the Age of twenty two years (except she should marry before she arive to the Age of twenty two years, then the said twenty pounds to be paid her, And the Remainder to be paid in three years after, with Interest for the same till paid. I also give her my best Bed & Furniture.

Item: I give to my Daughter Susanna Kittredge the sum of Sixty Pounds Lawful money, twenty pounds to be paid her when she arrives to the Age of Eighteen years, and the Remainder in five years after with Interest for the same till paid.

Item: I give to my three Daughters, Namely Elizabeth, Hannah & Susanna Kittredge the remainder of my Household goods & Furniture (except my Wet & dry cash) and also the one third I gave Sarah my aforesaid Wife, or what of the same may remain at her decease or marriage, all which is to be equally Divided amongst them, my abovesaid Daughters. I also give to them my said Daughters the Privilege of living in my House for so long as they shal live a single life, and the Liberty of keeping a Cow or Swine on the produce of my Land I have given to my two sons John & Jacob Kittredge.

Item: It is my Will that if either of my Daughters or Granddaughters aforenamed should die and leave no lawful Issue, then what I have given to either of them should be equally divided amongst my surviving Daughters or their Heirs.

Item: I Give to my two sons John & Jacob Kittredge my Wet and Dry cash also my Pew in the North Meeting House in Andover aforesaid to be equally divided between them, they to allow my aforesaid Wife & Daughters to set in said Pew as long as they live unmarried. And if there is any of my Estate that I have not disposed of in this Will either Real Personal or mixed of what name or nature soever I give the same to my aforesaid sons John & Jacob Kittredge.

Lastly, I do Hereby Constitute and appoint my aforesaid son John Kittredge the sole Executor of my last Will & Testament, Allowing this & no other to be so. In the witness whereof I the said John Kittredge have hereunto set my Hand & Seal this twentieth day of September, 1775, and in the fifteenth year of his Majesty's Reign.

Signed: John Kittredge.

"The Petition of James Kittredge Jr. of Tewksbury in the county of Middlesex, humbly sheweth—

"That his Father James Kittredge of said town kept a Tavern for many years in the same, his House being situated on the Country Road leading from Andover to Billerica: Travellers have allways Depended upon being entertained there, but ever since the twenty-third day of Jany last people could have none there by reason at that time your Petr's father was taken away by Death and altho' he left considerable of Spirituous Liquors in the House and your Pet'r living in the same, yet he dare not let travellers have any, his father's license being no warrant to him in that case, and as its a damage not only to Travellers but to your Pet'r to have the stock lay Dead on his hands, he therefore himself prays your excellency and hons. would be pleased to Impower the Justices of Gen. Sessions of the Peace for the county of Middlesex at their next sessions to grant him license to keep a Tavern in s'd House, that those Inconveniences may have a spedy Remedy, and as in Duty bound will ever Pray.

James Kittredge."

"Apr. 21, 1754. It was granted in the House of Representatives.

"Granted to empower the Court of Sessions to give a license to James Kittredge, jr."

36. V. DR. THOMAS KITTREDGE (John, John, John, John), born July 13, 1746, died Oct. 16, 1818. On Nov. 7, 1771, he married Susannah Osgood, the sister of Samuel Osgood, the first Postmaster General of the United States. She was born Aug. 23, 1754, and died Apr. 28, 1840. Dr. Thomas was the surgeon of Col. James Frye's regiment at the battle of Bunker Hill; this was the regiment recruited from Andover. As far as we know, that was all the service which he performed during the Revolution. It was he who built the present mansion in North Andover in 1784.

In May, 1787, a convention of delegates met at Philadelphia to revise the Articles of Confederation, and they drew up a form of Constitution which was to be submitted to the States. Dr. Kittredge was one of a committee of three sent by the town of Andover as its representatives at the Convention called by the Massachusetts Legislature to consider this question. He was also on the committee for the town of Andover for making arrangements for proper services on the death of George Washington.

He was a Republican (as a Democrat was then called) and as Essex County was a stronghold of the Federalists, the two factions were constantly at scraps, and Dr. Thomas came in for many hard blows. At his death however the Salem Gazette, which was a high Federalist paper, very handsomely reprinted the obituary notice that had appeared in the Essex Register, a Republican paper; and the Columbian Centinel of Boston, also a high Federalist paper, inserted a notice shorter but laudatory.

Dr. Thomas received the honorary degree of M.D. from Harvard College in 1811. He took many students into his house, and gave them their medical training, of whom a list is appended later.

1818, Oct. 21. Essex Register (Salem):

We have received the afflictive news of the death of the Hon. Thomas Kittredge of Andover, one of the Councellors of the Mass. Medical Society, and often in the different branches of our Legislature, aged 72. He was soon distinguished among the members of his family by his great success in Chirurgical operations, and in his treatment of such cases of insanity as were committed to him, as well as in the general practice of physic, in which he was as often consulted as any man in this part of the State. His very agreeable and mild manners, and his style of life and hospitality, gave every aid to his talents and usefulness;

so that as a citizen, a magistrate, a physician and friend, he had an uncommon share of the public confidence. No citizen was unable to find the point at which he must discover something to esteem and commend. In a uniform and pure character, and by his extensive acquaintance, he had acquired a value which few men have the opportunities to possess from the favorable opinion they can obtain, or from the general belief that their advice will command all the relief they are to hope from the medical art. The suavity of manners was never lessened by the flattery he received, and he never was in higher reputation than at the hour of his death. The nature of his affliction had long given him notice that his malady was at the seat of life, and after several narrow escapes, without much warning, he left life, when apparently ready for all his usual duties in it. His death will be felt in Andover, and in the county, and the loss will be that of a friend, a good citizen, and most useful man.

(The above notice was reprinted in the Salem Gazette of Oct. 23, and in the Independent Chronicle (Boston) of Oct. 24.)

From the Columbian Centinel, Boston, Oct. 24, 1818:

In Andover, the Hon. Thomas Kittredge, aged 72, the Representative of that town in the General Court, and one of the Counsellors of the Mass. Medical Society. His fame in successful chirurgical operations, and treatment of cases of insanity, was extensive and well founded. In political life, he united firmness of principles to great suavity of manners and candour of discussion, and was equally respected for integrity by political foes and friends.

Extract from the Sun Gazette and County Advertiser of Dover, N. H. Saturday, July 18, 1807.

It is with sensations of real grief we announce to the public the death of Dr. Jacob Kittredge of this town. After a short illness which even his physicians, men of acknowledged skill, by no means considered alarming, he bade adieu to the cares and disquietudes of mortality on the 15th inst. in the 48th year of his age. Few gentlemen within the sphere of our knowledge have possessed superior claims to the tribute of grateful respect from an enlightened public. His life which had been almost solely devoted to the duties of his profession, presented not only certain proofs of his medical skill and ability, but of his unremitted attention and assiduity to the calls and applications of his numerous employers.

Nor can we, in attempting justice, however inadequate, to a character so evidently deserving of public and private esteem, stop here. His domestic life presents a picture no less amiable, no less attractive than that which was devoted to public usefulness. The circle of his more particular acquaintances, the neighborhood in which he lived, lament unfeignedly in this afflictive providence, the loss of the real philanthropist and the truly honest man. His repeated acts of benevolence were not restricted to a few dependents or to his more immediate friends; society in general felt the benefits of his beneficence and the sons and daughters of poverty and distress universally rise up and pronounce him blessed.

He exhibited an example worthy of imitation in his domestic economy. His children, an amiable family (six in number), who were wont to behold him with love and confidence unmixed with degrading fear or mean servility, now bewail his loss with unaffected tears and lamentations. He has left an afflicted wife of his youth to mourn this bereaving dispensation in weeds of heartfelt woe. He died fully resigned to the will of that all-powerful Being in whom we live and move and have our being and who doth his pleasure among the inhabitants of the earth. The last sad rites of sepulture were yesterday performed by a numerous concourse of afflicted relatives and sympathizing friends.

In Temple's History of North Brookfield, it says that: "This town seems not to have shared in the prevalent prejudice against inoculation as a guard against virulent small pox. Probably it was due to the fact that two of our leading men, viz, Hon. Jedediah Foster and Wm. Ranger, went to Esopus, N. Y., entered a hospital there, were inoculated, had the disease, and returned in health. Sept. 30, 1776, the town voted to establish a small pox hospital at the old Silas Walker house, to be in charge of Dr. Wm. Thomas and Dr. Jacob Kittredge."

In another place: "Dr. Snell says: At the time of my settlement (1798) the scenery was rural beyond almost any other town in the region, the population everywhere very sparse, and not five—if there was one—well-finished and neatly painted house in town—and but three or four dwelling houses within about half a mile of our meeting-house, which of all others was the place of the greatest retirement, except on the Sabbath. The spot, while far from central, furnished no eligible sites for building; and there being no mercantile business in town, but upon a very small scale, and but one mechanic (Capt. John Potter) within nearly a mile, the house of worship had around it through all the week, a remarkable stillness; disturbed only by the coming and going of the sickly, the palsied, those afflicted with swellings, disjointed bones, broken limbs, and the diseased of every sort, who resorted for relief, like the multitude around Bethesda, and with much the same confidence of a cure, to your far-famed surgeon, Dr. Jacob Kittredge, whose decease in 1813 was so much lamented."

Dr. Snell was the orthodox minister in North Brookfield for fifty-three years.

SMOKE ON THE SURRY SIDE

A century back Dr. Kendall Kittredge of Somesville was the only physician on Mount Desert Island. His field of endeavor extended over the adjoining shores and the misty, blue, low-lying islands that dotted the adjacent waters. There were no macadam roads, or automobiles or speedy motor craft as there are today, and the doctor made his way to his patients as best he might—on foot, horseback, or by rowboat and sailboat.

When his services were in demand at Surry or Brooklin, on the opposite side of Bluehill Bay, it was the custom to build a fire on a certain point of land and send up a long spiral of brown smoke. Anyone dwelling on the western side of Mount Desert or on Beech Hill who spied the primitive summons was expected to get word to Dr. Kittredge that: "There's smoke on the Surry side of the Bay, Doctor!"

How many dreary, painful and anxious hours must have elapsed between the building of the fire and the arrival of the physician! In winter Dr. Kittredge was frequently called to remote points that could be reached only on snow-shoes. On one occasion when the deep snow was too soft and light to bear his weight even on webs, he threw his saddle bags as far ahead as possible and lay down and rolled to them, repeating this process time after time until he finally reached the cabin of his patient. None but a rugged man could have performed such a feat or have stood the exposure.

Miss J. A. Thompson of Ellsworth, a great-great-granddaughter, says that Doctor Kittredge was assisted in making up his remedies by his daughter Almenia, to whom he bequeathed all his formulae, with small copper steel-yards, iron mortar and pestle. For many years she continued compounding and using her father's medicines in her own large family and among her neighbors.

(From the History of Amherst, Page 369):

Among the Amherst men in the Battle of Bunker Hill was Solomon Kittredge; he was in Captain Crosby's company.

(From the same History, Page 373.)

A regiment was raised in Dec., 1775, and placed under the command of Col. Timothy Bedel, which was ordered to join the northern army in New York with which it was to march to reinforce the army in Canada. In one of the companies in this regiment we find among the Amherst men, Solomon Kittredge. This regiment was surrendered to the British and Indians by its commanding officer, Maj. Butterfield, at a place called The Cedars, May 19, 1776. Many of the men were inhumanly treated by their captors. Their clothing was stripped from their persons, and in this condition they were made to run between two files of Indians, who beat them as they passed. Years afterwards many of them were paid by the legislature for the clothing they lost at that time.

Solomon Kittredge's military record was an interesting one. As shown by his pension declaration, verified April 24, 1818, corroborated and supplemented by the New Hampshire Rolls, he served three enlistments: viz.:

1 May 17, 1775, enlisted for eight months in Captain Josiah Crosby's Company of Colonel James Reed's Regiment, and he swears that he "was in the Battle of Bunker Hill so called" June 17, 1775.

2 On his discharge in January, 1776, reenlisted for one year Captain Daniel Wilkins' Company in Colonel Timothy Bedel's Regiment of the New Hampshire line. The regiment was raised for guarding the frontier along the Connecticut River. Hardly was it organized before news came of the disaster to the expedition, under Arnold and Montgomery, against Quebec, and they were ordered to join the Northern Continental Army in New York for reinforcing our army in Canada. They marched to Ticonderoga, thence to St. Johns where they were engaged, and finally had another battle with a superior force of British and Indians at a place called "The Cedars," about forty-five miles south-west from Montreal.

Col. Bedel was absent at the time and the subordinate officer, Major Butterfield, in command, was considered by his men a coward when, against their protests, he surrendered. The promise of protection to the prisoners, made by the British officers, was promptly broken, and they were left to be plundered, tortured, and in some instances, killed by Indians. Those who remained alive were taken to an island in a lake near the "Two Mountains" where they were kept naked, without shelter, and almost without food, for ten days, till General Arnold succeeded in securing their exchange.

Some of them had the smallpox at the time. The Indians took their clothes with the others and caught the disease therefrom, with disastrous results. This may have saved the feelings of the sufferers a little.

In New Hampshire State Papers, Vol. 14, at page 476, is the following petition, signed by Kittredge, and twenty-eight others:

"To the Honorable the Council and House of Representatives to be convened at Exeter, in New Hampshire on the 10th day of March, 1779:

The Humble Petition and Remonstrance of the Company Commanded by Capt. Daniel Wilkins, in Col. Beedel's Regt. in Canada, humbly sheweth that on ye 19th of May, 1776, we unhappily fell into the hand of our unnatural and savage Enemy at the Cedars in Canada, when Major Butterfield, our commanding officer, capitulated with Capt. Foster of the British Army to the great grief and surprise of said company, on the following terms, viz: that we surrendered ourselves as prisoners of war, and was to deliver up our arms which accordingly we did, and we was to have our packs and Baggage—and Capt. Foster engaged not to suffer the savages to plunder or abuse us, nor suffer the British troop so to do.

But contrary to Rules of War they inhumanly without regard to their promise, suffered the savages to rob and plunder us of our packs and baggage, and strip us of our clothes off our backs, and left us entirely naked. In this deplorable condition we were left in an enemy's country without money, clothing or friends that could contribute to our relief—Therefore your humble petitioners humbly pray that your honors would take the matter under consideration adequate to the loss we sustained, and your Petitioners will gratefully acknowledge the favor and as in duty bound will ever pray."

Kittredge received, in response to such petition, an appropriation for his clothes of six pounds, sixteen shillings, sixpence. This came however more than three years after he lost them. It does not appear how his temporary embarrassment was relieved. Served out his term and was discharged at Stillwater, in January, 1777.

3. July 19, 1777, enlisted in Captain John Bradford's Company of Col. Moses Nichols' Regt., raised to reinforce the Northern Army, gathering at Stillwater, to oppose the advance of Burgoyne. In his pension declaration he says: "I was in Bennington Battle so called." His company there played a very important part.

About this time took up his residence in Packersfield for there is no record in the town books that a son Solomon Jr., was born to him there September 28, 1778, and a daughter in 1780. Lived on what was subsequently known as the James Clark place in the north-east quarter. Later, probably before 1800, moved to Mount Vernon, where he died October 22, 1845, aged 90 years, 2 months and 19 days. He frequently visited his relatives in Nelson, descendants of Joshua Kittredge. The late Russell H. Kittredge could recall one such visit in his own boyhood.

(This was all copied from the Town Records in Nelson, N. H., by Mrs. E. A. Bronson.)

68. V. DR. ZEPHANIAH KITTREDGE (Solomon, Francis, John, John), born in Billerica, Aug. 24, 1757, died Aug. 17, 1843. Married Elizabeth Stickney, Mar. 8, 1781, and they lived at Mt. Vernon, N. H.

(Notes from the History of the Town of Amherst, N. H.)

Zephaniah Kittredge of Amherst township, served in Capt. Benj. Taylor's company of militia which marched from Amherst, Dec. 8, 1775 to join the Continental Army on Winter Hill, Mass. He was a member of a company raised in Amherst, commanded by Capt. Timothy Clement, which was sent to Portsmouth, April 15, 1776. On the 23d of November following it was ordered to Ticonderoga, to which place it marched in February, 1777.

He served in a regiment raised July 16, 1776 to reinforce the army in Canada. He was in Capt. William Harper's company of this regiment and served about three and a half months.

September 25, 1776 a regiment was organized under the command of Col. Pierce Long. On the 23d of November following it was ordered to Ticonderoga to which place it marched in Feb. 1777. Zephaniah Kittredge's name is on the list of those mustered in.

Dr Ingalls married 2nd, on Mar. 27, 1836, Lydia Smith, the sister of his daughter-in-law, Augusta Smith.

(Extract from the History of Essex County, date 1888 of the Publication.)

Dr. Ingalls Kittredge became a citizen of the town of Beverly Aug. 6th, 1804, when his first poll tax was assessed.

In April 1803, in consideration of the sum of $1,450, he purchased of Simeon Brown, Gent. a tract of land consisting of nine acres, upon which he erected a large mansion house; it is a portion of the well known Kittredge Farm, and through the present proprietor, Mr. Charles W. Galloupe, still remains in the family.

In the deed of purchase of the nine acres, he is mentioned as "a physician of Townsend, Middlesex Co ," and his superior intelligence and ability soon gained for him in his new home a large and successful practice, particularly in surgery, which extended widely to the surrounding towns, where he was well known as the most skillful surgeon of the vicinity. His early visits were made on horseback, but a largely increasing practice soon compelled a more convenient means of communication, and he adopted the so-called "Sulky," a narrow, high-hung, old-fashioned "Chaise." The quaint old vehicle was known as the "Doctor's Sulky," and was soon as familiar to the people of the surrounding towns as was the face of the sturdy Doctor himself.

In his practice Dr. Kittredge did not hesitate to depart from the established regulations of the "Faculty," whenever in his judgment, the condition of his patients could be improved by such treatment. This course subjected him to the unfavorable, and often unkind criticism of his contemporaries, but his remarkable successes sustained and secured to him the public confidence, which during his whole lifetime, he never forfeited. He was often urged to accept membership in the Medical "Faculty," but his independent nature could brook no rules inconsistent with his own conclusions, and during the length of his active professional life, he declined associating himself with any society. Later in life, however, he consented to permit his name to be presented for membership.

The death of his esteemed wife on October 7, 1833, and his marriage in 1836, induced him to change his residence to a more central location, and he purchased the Chapman Estate, situated at the corner of Federal and Cabot Streets. Here he lived until June, 1844, when a most disastrous fire occurred, which reduced the beautiful building to ashes. Under his indomitable will and perseverance, the ashes were hardly cold before he commenced the erection of the sightly and elegant mansion which still stands upon the same site.

In politics, he was an outspoken adherent of the Anti-Slavery party. George Thompson, the noted English philanthropist, Member of Parliament and Abolitionist, found in him a friend, who without fear or favor, espoused his then unpopular cause and gave him substantial and efficient aid. Actuated by a desire that the citizens of Beverly should hear the distinguished man speak, the doctor applied to a religious society of which he was a prominent member, for the use of their edifice for a public lecture. The favor was refused. Later on the society had a meeting and, anticipating some trouble from the doctor, in order to propitiate him, chose him moderator of the meeting. He never failed to improve his opportunities, and before the adjournment, he had secured the adoption of a series of Anti-Slavery resolutions, which, much to the chagrin of the officers, but greatly to the satisfaction of the members of the audience, committed the society to the support of the unpopular "Anti-Slavery party."

the western border of the State, and about 100 miles from Portland. He purchased a lot now known as the Marsh Farm. He went back to Chester where he spent the winter, but returned to Weld the following Spring, felled trees, burned and cleared a few acres of his land, erected for himself a log house, and returned again to pass the winter in Chester. The next Spring, in 1800, he came with his family to Weld, and remained until 1818, when they removed to Ohio.

August 16, 1832, Joshua Kittredge made a pension declaration, now on file at Washington, from which, and the Massachusetts and New Hampshire Rolls, it appears that he served three enlistments, viz.:

1. April 2, 1778, enlisted from Tewksbury in Captain John Moore's Company of Colonel Jonathan Brewer's Regiment of guards and served three months and two days guarding "troops of convention," i.e., prisoners from Burgoyne's army at Cambridge.

2. October 7, 1779, enlisted in Captain Joshua Leland's Company of guards and was stationed at Cobble Hill near Boston, in the battalion of Major Nathaniel Heath, garrisoning a fort, for upwards of a month.

3. In May, 1780, then living at Amherst, N. H., enlisted at Lyndeborough, N. H., and marched to West Point, N. Y., where he was assigned to Captain McGregor's Company of Colonel Courtland's Regiment. Was selected to join the light infantry under General Lafayette and marched to Elizabethtown and elsewhere in New Jersey. Discharged in November, 1780.

He mentions that his service was "the same year that Arnold escaped from West Point," indicating that he was there at the time.

77. V. Jeremiah Kittredge (Thomas, Thomas, James, John), born Oct. 5, 1763, died Aug. 23, 1818. Married Annar H. Chapman, Jan. 24, 1793. She was born May 8, 1766, and died Oct. 1, 1848.

REMINISCENCES OF THE EARLY PHYSICIANS OF LOWELL AND VICINITY

By D. N. Patterson, M.D.

Tenth paper

The circle of adjoining towns whose memorabilia of early physicians we have considered in previous papers would be incomplete did we not include that of Tewksbury.

With no disrespect to any who have in the past, or who may in the future, practise the healing art in that ancient town, we venture to affirm that it is doubtful if there ever was or ever will be within its borders a greater than Dr. Kittredge.

HENRY KITTREDGE, M.D.

Dr. James Thatcher in his most admirable work, "American Medical Biography," in speaking of Dr. Thomas Kittredge, who was an uncle of Dr. Henry Kittredge, uses these words, which are perfectly applicable to the subject of this sketch: "The family of which he was a member has become so distinguished for surgical skill in New England, that in many places the name alone is a passport to practise; and the number of practitioners of this name is very considerable. This is to be attributed, not only to the well-earned reputation of Dr. Kittredge, but to that of his father, who also had a high reputation in surgery; and it is not improbable that his grandfather and great-grandfather, the latter of whom came to this country from Germany at an early period and settled at Tewksbury, were eminent in the same line."

This will readily account for the tradition which has been handed down that on account of the great renown which was accorded to this remarkable family, and of the wide reputation which they achieved as representatives of medical skill, several physicians in New Hampshire applied to the legislature for a change of their names to Kittredge, believing that, in popular estimation at least, they would thus acquire something of hereditary prestige. But it may be reasonably doubted if such an influence as that which the Kittredges continued to exert for so long a period, could have been maintained simply on account of their name. But may we not look back of that, and recognize in their sterling integrity and soundness of mind and body the elements of that sturdy stock from which they sprang.

The Doctor Kittredge with whom this paper is concerned was educated at Phillips Academy and studied medicine with his father. At the age of only 23, he commenced practise in Tewksbury, where he continued until his death, which occurred nearly forty years after. In person Dr. Kittredge was tall, with a well-built and compact frame, capable of great powers of endurance.

Dr. Kittredge was a very practical man, which was clearly demonstrated in his method of practise. Doubtless his success as a practitioner was, in no small degree, due to the liberal use of the tincture of good common sense, which he made an important ingredient in the medicines, which he himself compounded. He held human life too sacred for experiment or mere guesswork, and in accordance with that faith, he brought to the bedside of his patients honest purpose of heart and sincerity of manner. He was not a stern and unapproachable man, but affable, courteous in his intercourse, and his conversation was usually facetious, animated and entirely free from any semblance of affectation.

Dr. Kittredge enjoyed an exceptionally large practise not only in Tewksbury, but in the towns adjoining. Like his ancestors, he was a distinguished surgeon, and his reputation in that department in no sense diminished the high standard which others of his name had attained. As a portion of Tewksbury, bounded by the Concord and Merrimac rivers, contained many families whom Dr. Kittredge had attended, and some had moved into Lowell, his services were frequently demanded in this immediate vicinity.

Dr. Kittredge took an earnest and deep interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the town, serving on its various committees during his long residence there. With the exception of the clergyman, Dr. Kittredge was the only professional man in the town, and being a justice of the peace, he was frequently consulted with reference to town business, schools, settlement of estates and other matters of legal importance.

He was one of the first to engage in the temperance movement of those days, when it required not only moral courage but often some personal sacrifice to contend against a common usage which was more universally practised than at the present day.

There are those still living in Tewksbury who remember Dr. Kittredge, and their united testimony, without one dissenting voice, is, that he was an able physician, a skillful surgeon, and above all else, an honorable, upright Christian man, in whose life we may discover "deeds as heroic, all unsyllabled and unsung though they be, as any that the world perpetuates in marble and bronze."

Dr. Kittredge continued in active practise until a few weeks before his death, the cause of which is to the writer unknown, but occurred Dec. 18, 1847, at the age of nearly 61.

His death was regarded as a great loss to the place. Many individuals and families, to whom he had long ministered in sickness and was their only medical adviser, looked upon his death as a personal affliction.

87. VI. DR. RUFUS KITTREDGE (Benjamin, John, John, John, John), born in Tewksbury, Mass., June 28, 1789, died in Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 23, 1854. Married the widow Susan P. Haven, June 1, 1842. She was originally Susan Pickering Lyman, and was born in Portsmouth, Aug. 31, 1813. She married William Haven, Jr., Sept. 29, 1834; he died and she married Dr. Kittredge. She died May 9, 1881, and is buried in the Haven lot in the cemetery in Portsmouth.

There is the following obituary in the Portsmouth Morning Chronicle of Wednesday, Feb. 22, 1854:

Died in this city, on Tuesday, Rufus Kittredge, M.D., aged 66. Dr. Kittredge was esteemed in his profession as a skillful, cautious physician, and has been a successful practitioner of

Obituary of Dr. John Kittredge of Gloucester:

Died in Gloucester, on the 31st inst, universally lamented, John Kittredge, Esq. Collector of the Customs, Aged 46.—It is with emotions of sympathetic grief that we attempt to portray the character of the deceased. Dr. Kittredge was the son of the late Hon. Thomas Kittredge of Andover. He was educated at Harvard University, and graduated in 1795. He embraced the profession of a physician, and commenced practice in Newburyport, where he continued to give great celebrity in the line of his profession until 1805 when he was appointed to the office of Collector of the Customs in Gloucester, which occasioned his immediate removal to this town, much to the regret of his numerous Newburyport friends. In the office of Collector, he has given universal satisfaction. Merchants and all others concerned in commercial business have given the most unqualified attestations to the peculiarly strict accommodating manner in which the affairs of the office have been conducted. While he strictly and cautiously adhered to his duty, he never used that rigid and forbidding severity that ever created him one enemy. His address was gentlemanly and commanding, and his intercourse on all occasions and with all classes of his fellow citizens, was peculiarly familiar, and in the domestic circle he was affable and engaging to all who came within the sphere of his acquaintance. In 1818 he was chosen President of the Gloucester Bank, in which office as well as that of a Director, he gave the most perfect satisfaction. In all the various duties of a public nature which he was called upon to exercise, no one discharged them with more promptness and fidelity than did Dr. Kittredge. As a citizen in the common walks of life, he sustained an exemplary character, nor was the cry of distress made to him in vain, for he was ever ready to contribute to those who stood in need. During his long and tedious sickness, he maintained a firm and manly fortitude, notwithstanding the nature of his disease pointed directly to his dissolution, still he was patient and resigned, although at times he suffered the most excruciating pain. To his bereaved partner and children, the loss is peculiarly distressing—a husband endeared by all the tender ties of conjugal felicity,—a parent whose fond heart doted on the little objects of his love, while their growing years were watched by a father's anxious anticipation of seeing them grow up the pride and ornament of their sex and age. But alas! the fond husband and parent is no more, all that was lovely and amiable, and the joy and delight of friends and associates, is consigned to the silent tomb. May the surviving relatives submit to the will of their heavenly parent, and learn resignation from the dispensations of his providence.

The end.

There is another obituary which speaks of his having been surgeon of the Crescent frigate, destined as a present to the Dey of Algiers, and that he made a voyage in this ship to the Mediterranean.

The following is from a local historian.

"Judge Kittredge was a man widely known and respected in the community and state, being a lawyer of ability and prominence, and always before the public. For eight years, he represented the town in the legislature, and was county senator for two years; he was two years speaker of the House of Representatives, five years State's Attorney, six years Judge of the County Court, one year Judge of the Circuit Court; one year Lieutenant Governor, and President of the Senate, and for nearly seven years Assessor of Internal Revenue. He filled these places with honor, and to the acceptance of his fellow men, because his eminent ability and high moral and religious character fitted him to be thus called of his fellow men, without any obtrusive officiousness of office-seeking on his part. In politics, Judge Kittredge was a Whig; in religion a Congregationalist; in manners elaborately polite and courteous; in conversation affluent, affable and animated; in statue tall and stately. He was ever the advocate of the conservative and moral. Lt. Governor of Vermont 1852 and 1853. First President of the National Insurance Company of Vermont.

Charles James Kittredge was born in Hinsdale, Apr. 1, 1818, the son of Dr. Abel and Eunice (Chamberlain) Kittredge. His father was the first settled physician in the town. On his mother's side, the line runs back seven generations to Joseph Chamberlain of Colchester, Ct. As a young man, he taught school. His business career as a merchant began in 1842, in a store where he traded successfully for ten years. In 1852, he formed a partnership in the woolen business with C. H. Plunkett. The firm built the mill nearest the Dalton town line, which also proved a profitable enterprise. In 1860, on the death of C. H. Plunkett, the business was merged in with the other Plunkett mills as the Plunkett woolen company, of which he became the president. His connection with the woolen business extended over a period of 51 years.

A republican in politics, Mr. Kittredge held the various town offices; he was a member of the House of Representatives in 1868 and of the Senate in 1869 and in 1870. He was also a state director of the Boston & Albany Railroad for a number of years, and was county commissioner for six years, from 1871 to 1877.

He died at his home in Hinsdale on Mar. 2, 1903, in the 85th year of his age. He had been for years the foremost citizen of the town.

The following Resolution was presented by a Committee of the "Senate of '70" at the thirty-third Annual Reunion at Young's Hotel, May 1, 1903, and adopted by unanimous standing vote:

The recollection of our late associate, Charles J. Kittredge, remains as of one firm and convincing in his opinions, courteous and earnest in his expression of them, tolerant of opposition, and yet so calm, clear and convincing in defense as to be always a formidable though never an irritating antagonist.

He won our hearty respect and confidence while associated with us, and retained both during the years of separation since that time, and now that he has joined our "Silent Majority," we will cherish his memory as of one of the purest, noblest, truest of all who sat with us about the round table in the Senate Chamber in 1870.

In "Mt. Vernon"; Aug. 7th, 1836:

Deacon Josiah Kittredge in the 50th year of his age. In the death of Dea. Kittredge not only a numerous family, but also the church of which he was a member and an officer, have sustained no ordinary loss. As a husband and father he was attentive, affectionate and faithful. As a citizen he was industrious, generous, public-spirited. As a Christian he was consistent, uniform and devoted. The cause of Christ was dear to his heart, and his tongue was ever ready to speak, and his hand open to contribute for its advancement. The conference and prayer-meeting was a place he coveted, and scarce ever did he fail to give it animation by his presence and his voice.

He felt a deep interest in the young, and earnestly desired their early conversion. This subject was much upon his mind as he lay upon his sick-bed, and at times when he would begin to express his feelings, the swelling emotions of his bosom would restrain his utterance. His sickness was of long continuance and painful, but he endured it with patience and resignation, and manifested the power of the Gospel to comfort and sustain amidst the severest sorrows and distresses. His friends are consoled by the confident expectation that their loss is his gain, and may the members of his church with which he was connected, by his death be so quickened in their zeal, in that the interest of Zion may not suffer by his removal.

The following is taken from a letter, written by Charles Brown Kittredge to Josiah Edward Kittredge of Rochester, N. Y., dated Sept. 15, 1905.

Asa Kittredge left for California in 1853, and was lost on the burned steamer Independence, off the coast of the Margarette Islands. He was buried on the shore by those who survived the catastrophe. He was a large, strong-built man, broad-shouldered, and stood six feet high. He was light complexioned, and was reported to have been a Christian and a gentleman, loved and respected by all who knew him.

150. VI. JAMES R. KITTREDGE (Nathaniel, Ebenezer, Daniel, Daniel, John), born in Chester, N. H., 1783, died in Weld, Maine, July 8, 1852. In 1806 he married Mary Abbot of Dunbarton, and soon after moved to the latter place, from which they came to No. 5, and settled on the Asa Masterman farm. This is from the Maine Historical and Genealogical Recorder, which generally calls the town of Weld, "No. 5". To quote again: He built a log house as soon as he arrived, and from logs hewed enough boards to construct a floor on which to place their bed, and moved in. His house contained the first window (other than an opening in the wall stopped in coldest weather by a board or blanket), in the settlement; it was made of a sheepskin scraped very thin and stretched across the opening in the wall; this of course was not like glass, but let in the light and kept out the wind and cold. The next winter he finished his floor and another overhead. He taught school winters for several years in his own house at first, and afterward at different houses constructed for the purpose in the settlement; he also held several town offices.

His widow taught a school summers for ten or twelve years after his death, in her own house, doing her housework and teaching the children to read and write, and to "cipher" as far as the "Rule of Three" in Arithmetic. She spent her declining years with her son Decatur in Carthage, where she died Feb. 3, 1882, aged 95.

In a sketch of Tewksbury, written by the Rev. E. W. Pride, is the following account of Jeremiah Kittredge; Mr. Pride says that he received it from Mr. J. C. Kittredge of Gardner Road, Brookline, Mass.

Jeremiah Kittredge was born at the old homestead, opposite Round Pond; he remained with his father until he was twenty-one years of age, and then started forth, and walked to Charlestown for employment. He entered there the grocery-store of Skinner & Herd, where he remained several years.

He was faithful to his employers then as always, and did his best; by serving them he served himself; and good habits, with diligence and frugality, were not wanting. After a proper apprenticeship, he with a young man by the name of Wyman, in the same store, established themselves in the grocery business, opposite the Boston and Maine depot, near the junction of Haverhill and Charlestown Streets.

The venture was successful, and after a few years, the firm was dissolved. Mr. Kittredge then moved to the corner of Hanover and Union Streets. A wholesale importing business was carried on here; and that he might extend it, vessels were built for the purpose of importing. These were sent to the West Indian ports, Jeremie, Jacmel, Saint Thomas and other places in the West Indies, as well as to the Baltic ports. The principal vessel was the barque Lexington, built on land in South Boston, purchased for the purpose. Manufactured goods and groceries were exchanged for cotton, logwood, mahogany, coffee and other commodities.

After staying in this store till about 1835, he moved to an office situated on the north side of Commercial Street, where he remained until his death. Here he extended the business, adding naval stores to the otherwise many interests. Camphene, a burning fluid popular at the time, was invented by him, and from which the returns were lucrative. In this part of the business he associated with himself several partners, mostly relatives, whom he in this way benefited, as well as being helped by their efficient services. He possessed that characteristic of genius, namely, the power of selecting subordinates well.

The naval-store department brought him into intimate relations with Southern people, whose acquaintance he found agreeable and friendly. Spirits of turpentine, tar, pitch, rosin and all that is found in that connection were manufactured and sold by him. It can be readily seen, from what has been written, that the business was extensive, and one that could have been invented and conducted only by a superior man; one gifted extraordinarily in a commercial way.

He was essentially, and to the heart's core, a man of business. His aim was single, and he pursued it with unswerving energy. Fond of literature and science, he could only gratify his taste for them by attending lectures, on account of the limited leisure at his disposal.

He never entered political life, not accepting even of a public trust, although solicited to do so; his known integrity and mercantile ability making him a very desirable candidate for such a position. He was one of those many self-made men found in New England and elsewhere, the fruits of whose toil seem to put to shame many who have been favored with far greater advantages.

In those days mercantile enterprises were attended with more risks and trials than at present, although competition was not nearly as great. Fire insurance, for one thing, was not as general or effective as now. Mr. Kittredge met with several losses from the consuming fiend. When he began his career until the time of his death, Boston was a much smaller, and a very different place from what it has become since.

In 1843 he purchased from the other heirs their rights in the homestead property in Tewksbury; and in 1854, he removed the old house, which had stood since early in the eighteenth century, and built a capacious structure with a barn. It was his intention to make Tewksbury his summer residence, but unfortunately death came before he had an opportunity to do so.

Except for the details about Mr. Kittredge's children, that is the end of Mr. Pride's account. The house which he built was burned, and the land is now occupied by a Roman Catholic Novitiate.

JOSEPH KITTREDGE, M.D. II

(Extract from a discourse delivered at North Andover, July 21, 1878, by Rev. Samuel Johnson.)

Today, as friends and neighbors, we feel a common loss,—a loss which all confess, and none would even try to measure. A familiar face has passed from our daily paths; one that we all have loved to meet; gentle, cordial, frank and generous impulses shining through its features by pure force of nature, and that refinement of social tact and feeling which makes so essential a part of true culture. Here was one who brought healing to your bedsides; who touched your flagging pulses with the cheerful and kindly skill that makes the good physician a household benediction, and rewards his faithful cares with an unwonted confidence and love; one who continued with honor the responsibilities of an honored name in his profession, identified with this old historic town.

He had the secret of friendship, the command of good-will, and the virtue of that honest, practical sense which wins perpetual esteem and gratitude from every seeker for a counsellor and friend in real life.

What a void such a nature leaves in the neighborhood which, all his life through, he has helped to dignify and sweeten with ways whose helpfulness all could appreciate and understand! How a neighborhood may thrive in the cheerful light of some sympathetic countenance, some indispensable well-doer, whose doing all men feel and know! We need ask no better contribution to social good than for one to have, simply and unobtrusively, without courting office, publicity, or personal tributes of any kind, made for himself, through a wide circle of intelligent New England people, a name for genial, sympathetic service, for practical uses, ready to meet these functions wherever there was desire or need. If we measure the success of life by the void its departure leaves in these supplies, we shall say that here a record has been made up that his children well may treasure and his townsmen read with gratitude and honor.

His mother died when he was six months old, and his father when he was about six years. He was bonded out to his uncle Mr. Fletcher of Amherst, N. H. This uncle was a very stern and strict man, and the boy had a hard time. Winter nights he would wake up and count the stars through holes in the roof of his room, and wake up mornings and find his bed covered with snow. At the age of 14, he had the right by law to choose a new guardian, so he chose Capt. Timothy Kittredge of Mt. Vernon, and remained with him a few years, then went to Lowell, Mass., where he worked for a baker, and there met the girl who was to be his future wife. In 1850, he sailed for California via Cape Horn, but after arriving at the Isthmus of Panama, he traded his ticket for that of a sailing boat, crossed the Isthmus, and took the boat for San Francisco.

After a few days out from the Isthmus, the ship was becalmed, and ran short of water, so they put out for the Sandwich Islands. There he met a relative, Mrs. Stearns who was a daughter of Timothy Kittredge. She and her husband were the first missionaries to the Hawaiian Islands. From Hawaii he went to San Francisco, and worked for a carpenter; he afterwards went up in the mining camps and worked as cook.

He returned home in 1853, and married Maria E. Chase, daughter of John Chase, in Lowell, Mass., May 15, 1853. From there, he went to Concord, N. H., where the first three children were born, and went into the grocery business with a Mr. John Nichols. In 1864, he moved to Mt. Vernon, N. H., and remained there until 1867.

Mrs. Kittredge died in Nov. 1899.

Rev. J. E. Kittredge asked for the dissolution of the pastoral relation existing between him and the Church of Geneseo Village, to take effect after the first Sunday in October. Dr. Kittredge spoke of the happy relations so long existing between himself and the Geneseo Church, but wished now to lay down the burden of so large a field. Elder E. E. Doty read resolutions of regard for Dr. Kittredge and regret upon losing him, and Mr. A. R. Scott spoke for the Trustees and congregation. Upon motion Dr. Kittredge's request was granted after many expressions of appreciation of his work and of personal esteem on the part of many of the members of Presbytery.

206. VII. Mary Emmeline Kittredge (Timothy, Josiah, Solomon, Francis, John, John), born in Mt. Vernon, N. H., July 23, 1834, died in Colorado, Jan. 24, 1905. Married William F. Stearns, son of the President of Amherst College, Aug. 24, 1859. He was born in 1834, and died May 21, 1874. They went immediately after their marriage to Bombay, India, where they lived until 1868. He was very successful financially, and they had a very delightful time, and made many friends. Three children were born there. They left India for the United States after nine years, and shortly after that, there were two severe financial panics in India, and Mr. Stearns business was ruined. He attempted to save something from the wreck, but worked so hard that his health went to pieces, and he died in 1874. Mrs. Stearns was left with seven children, and no money to depend on. She settled in Amherst with her father-in-law, and opened a girls school, which proved to be very successful. She brought up and educated her children, and left a wonderful impression of her personality and influence on all the scholars who attended the school, and on all who knew her. Four of her children died after they were grown up, and her courage and fortitude under such trouble were spoken of, as very remarkable. Her daughter Mabel married and went to Colorado to live, and Mrs. Stearns was very happy in going to stay with her, after the school was closed. She died there in January, 1905; her body was taken back to Amherst for burial by her husband.

(From the Evening Tribune of Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 28, 1932).

Cecil Kittredge Bancroft, 64, registrar, assistant to the principal and instructor in Latin at Phillips Andover Academy, died at 12.45 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the school. He had been ill since school opened in September.

An Andover graduate himself and the son of a former principal of the academy, Mr. Bancroft had been in the service of the school since 1906.

A cultural background that included two years study in Rome following his graduation from Yale, earned many friends for Mr. Bancroft throughout his life. The students had high regard for him. His acquaintances among undergraduates and alumni were numerous. Mr. Bancroft's position gave him a remarkable opportunity to know the pupils of the school better than most.

Mr. Bancroft was born at Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, in 1868. He was graduated from Phillips Andover in 1887, and received his degree, cum laude, from Yale in 1891. He studied archeology in Rome for the next two years.

While a student at Andover, Mr. Bancroft played on the academy football team.

When he returned to this country from Rome, he was made instructor in Latin at Yale University. About that time Dr. Alfred E. Stearns had succeeded Mr. Bancroft's father, Dr. C. F. P. Bancroft, as principal of the academy, and in 1906, Mr. Bancroft returned to Andover to act as registrar and instructor in Latin.

(From the New York Tribune of Wednesday, Dec. 18, 1912.)

Pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church for twenty years.

The Rev. Dr. Abbott Eliot Kittredge, pastor emeritus of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church at Madison Avenue and 57th Street, died yesterday morning at his home, 5 East 84th Street, after an illness of several months. Dr. Kittredge was 79 years old and was for twenty years pastor of the Madison Avenue Church. He retired six years ago, and was succeeded by the Rev. William Carter, the present pastor.

Dr. Kittredge was born in 1834 in Boston. His father was a deacon in the Eliot Congregational Church, of which the Rev. Jacob Abbott, author of juvenile books, was pastor, and it was after him that Dr. Kittredge was named. He was graduated from Williams College in 1854, and spent a year teaching school at Wilton, Conn., entering the Andover Theological Seminary in 1856. Three years later he was graduated and ordained pastor of the Winthrop Congregational Church in Charlestown, Mass. After four years he resigned, going to California, where he preached for six months at the Howard Street Presbyterian Church in San Francisco. From there he came to New York and took charge of the Eleventh Presbyterian Church on Madison Avenue. The fame of his work reached Chicago, and in 1870 he accepted a call to the Third Presbyterian Church in that city.

He remained there for sixteen years and built up his church into one of the most remarkable religious bodies in the country. Without depending on secular subjects for his sermons or resorting to popular methods of attracting people to his services, Dr. Kittredge filled his church to the doors at his Sunday and week-day meetings. In 1886 however, the unanimous call of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church brought him to New York. The funeral will be held at the Madison Avenue Church tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. The burial will be in Boston.

The Author of "Tenting Tonight".

The man who gave the soldiers of the Civil War and the country such a song as "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" is entitled to more than a paragraph when he strikes his tent this side of the river and passes over to the encampment beyond.

The author of that popular and heart-stirring song was Walter Kittredge, who died at Reed's Ferry, N. H., on Saturday, aged 71 years. He was a farmer, but having musical and some literary talent he composed both the music and verses of songs, a number of which have achieved wide circulation.

His "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" was published by Oliver Ditson and Co., Boston, in 1864, and at once was heard throughout the country, particularly in the camps and on the march of the Boys in Blue. It is a melodious air with a captivating refrain and sad, tender words suggestive of the pathos of broken circles and shattered comradeship at the camp fires after the battle.

The song is hardly less popular today than it was forty years ago when it was sung amid the scenes and by the heroes who inspired it.

Where "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," was written.

Walter Kittredge, a New Hampshire farm boy, who was born at Merrimac in Hillsboro County on October 8, 1834, wrote both the words and music of that stirring national ballad at the age of 28, while preparing to go to the front to serve in the Civil War. He was the tenth of a family of eleven children. In a family of that size, and with the limited opportunities prevailing at that time, it is not surprising to learn that, as a child, he never had a music teacher. He managed however to pick up a knowledge of singing, although history does not tell us how or where. At the age of 18, a year following his graduation from the Merrimac Institute, he started giving ballad concerts alone. A few years later he began to acquire a reputation as a composer, writing both words and music. After he wrote "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," he was unable to find a publisher for it, but he so popularized it with his own singing that a publisher was soon interested. Despite his musical career, Mr. Kittredge did not lose his love for farming, as the story of his life tells us that in 1903, just two years before his death, he was active as a farmer in Reed's Ferry, N. H. He went on concert tours with the Hutchinson Family in N. H. and Vt. for several years. The Oliver Ditson Company published a special souvenir edition of "Tenting Tonight," in booklet form with illustrations.

Lucy Dana's father was Samuel Luther Dana, a well-known chemist; her grandmother was the daughter of Joseph Willard, at one time President of Harvard College. Joseph Willard's grandfather, Rev. Samuel Willard, graduated from Harvard College in the Class of 1659. He was President of the College with the title of Vice-President, because he did not reside in Cambridge. Some of his sermons were published in the first folio ever printed in America. He performed the marriage ceremony for the father and mother of Benjamin Franklin. Lucy Dana's grandfather was Luther Dana, a Sea Captain, and there is a picture of one of his ships in the East India Museum in Salem, Mass.

Edmund Webster Kittredge.

The committee appointed by the Courts of Hamilton County, Ohio, for the purpose present the following memorial:

The time is so recent when failing eyesight befell Mr. Kittredge, that courts and lawyers had hardly grown accustomed to his absence from their midst when they learned, with great sorrow, that their old comrade will be seen no more.

Edmund Webster Kittredge was born Nov. 29, 1833, in Chester, N. H. His father, Dr. Rufus Kittredge, came from Chester and settled in Cincinnati in 1849. Mr. Kittredge graduated from Dartmouth College in 1854 and from Harvard Law School in 1856. He then pursued the study of law with Judge Timothy Walker until he opened an office for himself. Soon afterward he joined the late firm of Stallo and Kittredge, which was dissolved by Judge Stallo's retirement about thirty years later when he was appointed Minister to Italy by President Cleveland. With Joseph Wilby the firm of Kittredge and Wilby was then established which continued until Mr. Kittredge's recent retirement from active practice.

In 1866 Mr. Kittredge married Elizabeth, daughter of the late William Yates Gholson, who was one of the original judges of the Superior Court of Cincinnati and later a judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio. Of this estimable wife he was bereft in 1889. Eight children were born of this union, of whom six survive.

Either because he realized that the Law is "a jealous mistress" or from lack of inclination in other directions, Mr. Kittredge's entire career was at the bar. He neither sought nor held public office of any kind, though his talents would have won distinction on the bench or in legislative bodies.

He was, however, by no means neglectful of the duties of citizenship, but often contributed to the discussion of public questions in various ways. For many years after the close of the Civil War it was his custom to address his fellow citizens of Avondale every year on the political issues then pending, and through the press his views reached a much greater audience.

Knowing the necessity to the profession and to the community of thorough legal education, Mr. Kittredge gave much time and attention to the Cincinnati Law School, of whose Board of Trustees, he was for many years President. To him are largely due the establishment and maintenance of the present requirements for admission to the study and to the practice of law.

At the bar he had a successful and distinguished career. This was due to thorough preliminary preparation and to excellent natural gifts carefully developed and trained, all made effective by constant duty, close application and unflagging diligence. His success was not checked or marred by defects of temperament or deportment. Throughout the stress of mind, spirit and body during almost sixty years of practice, mostly in forensic combat, we recall no instance of unfairness, animosity or even discourtesy to court, comrade or opponent. Legal controversies, however strenuous or important, were always impersonal with him.

So far as the fame of the mere lawyer can be lasting it is recorded in the reports of the cases in which he took part. His name is given, with sometimes an abstract of his argument and his success or failure. But his form and features, his presence, all the elements of the personality which establish his rank in the estimation of his comrades—these live only in their memory and are lost as one by one they follow him into eternity. So it is fitting that the records of the courts wherein he so long and faithfully helped to administer justice regulated by law should set forth the respect and esteem in which as lawyer, citizen and man the Bench and Bar of his day will ever hold Edmund Webster Kittredge.

Salem Physician Had Received Many Honors.

Salem, Mass., March 13. Dr. Thomas Kittredge, who died in his home at 13 Chestnut Street Sunday noon after an illness of three weeks, will be buried tomorrow, following funeral services in the North Church at 11.

Dr. Kittredge was descended from a family of surgeons and doctors. His Father, the typical country physician, covered a radius of 40 miles in the surrounding country. His great-grandfather was a surgeon at Bunker Hill.

Dr. Thomas Kittredge received his early training at the Harvard Medical School and in New York. During the small pox epidemic in 1872 and 1873, he served at Gallup's Island, Boston. He held the position of assistant port physician of Boston until 1877, in which year he moved to Salem.

Several years ago, during another outbreak of the small pox, Dr. Kittredge was instrumental in stemming the course of the disease.

He early identified himself with the Mass. Militia; entering the military service of the State in April, 1875, being commissioned assistant surgeon of the 2nd Battalion of Artillery. He was discharged from that position, Sept. 14, 1875, and was commissioned as assistant surgeon of the 8th infantry, Aug. 21st, 1878; surgeon of the regiment, Aug. 10th, 1881, and medical director of the 2nd brigade, M.V.M., Mar. 7th, 1882. He was appointed Surgeon General with the rank of Brigadier General of Mass., by the late Governor William E. Russell, Jan. 8th, 1891, a position he held until the retirement of Governor Russell in December, 1893.

In 1879, Dr. Kittredge was appointed a member of the staff of surgeons and physicians of the Salem Hospital, and he so continued actively, answering all demands made upon his professional services for 35 years, until January, 1914, when he was retired, at his own request. Since then, however, he has cheerfully given of his services, when called upon, and also voluntarily assisted in times of emergency, such as the epidemic of influenza or grip. He was a member of the Essex South District Medical Society, and was admitted a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons in October, 1918, and during the World War was a member of the advisory board for this district. He was a member of the Essex Institute.

Dr. Kittredge was a dignified, polished gentleman of the old school, and his presence in the sick room, so overwhelming in itself, was at once a potent source of comfort, and wonderful help to the patient. On the street, he had always a pleasant smile and a warm grasp of the hand for all. Besides the great loss to the community as a physician and surgeon, he will be sorely missed because of his helping hand in times of great distress, his generosity, which was proverbial, and for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart.

228. VIII. George Watson Kittredge (Joseph, Joseph, Thomas, John, John, John, John), born Dec. 11, 1856, in North Andover, Mass. Graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the Class of 1877. Married Georgia Davis of Louisville, Kentucky, Oct. 17, 1888. She was born Oct. 1, 1861, and died Dec. 29, 1921. Mr. Kittredge was on the Corporation of the Institute of Technology when it chose its present site in Cambridge, Mass. He is a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He was a Director and a Vice-President of the American Society of Civil Engineers, an association with an international membership of 15,000; later he was elected an Honorary Member of this Society. He held the office of President of the American Railway Engineering Association, another sizable association with international membership; he is also an Honorary Member of this Association.

Partial Events in the Career of a North Andover Boy.

Given before the North Andover Historical Society, September 30, 1931, by Mr. George W. Kittredge himself.

Mr. President, Fellow-members of the North Andover Historical Society, and Guests.

The narrative that you will be given tonight will be a sketchy one—bound to be so if the events covering over half a century are crowded into a half hour's talk. It will perhaps seem less egotistical if, in giving it, the third person is used and the events depicted are given as those entering into the life of a North Andover Boy. Although the physical activities of his life are predominant herein he feels that in occupying some positions he has been of aid to the community and the country at large by planning developments and improvements that have added to prestige and have helped to mould public opinion along worth while lines.

To many of those present his life through the public Schools of the Town and through the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is more or less familiar and need not be dwelt upon.

In the Spring of 1880 he was offered a position as a rodman in the Engineering Corps of a division of the Pennsylvania Lines west of Pittsburgh—. The word "offered" is used advisedly for it is an outstanding fact that in his entire professional career extending over a period of about 50 years every position occupied by him was "offered" to him unsolicited, he never occupied a position for which he applied—. That position carried with it a stipend of $30 per month and out of that sum he had to pay his expenses not only where he lived but when he was on the road. It took him a considerable time to save $10 and as he mounted the steps of the pay-car one month he recklessly waved his $10 saying "This is the first $10 bill I ever had unbroken when the pay-car next came around." That night the chief of his party came to his domicile and borrowed it. Many years after when the North Andover Boy was President of the American Railway Engineering Association and the directors were in session to allot work to Committees the name of that chief of party was proposed as a committee chairman. Mr. W. B. Storey since President of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad asked, "Is he a worker"? The President answered "He worked me for the first $10 I ever had—and he still has it." He was confirmed as chairman.

Promotions came as fast as there were vacancies. In less than 3 years he was a Division Engineer in charge of 120 miles of road —one of the Pennsylvania's "poor relations." On this division he had his first experience with a real cyclone. One night he was on a train going to Washington Court House, Ohio. At Circleville, about 40 miles from his destination, his train was held for some time for a connecting train on another road. Noting the threatening appearance of the sky and knowing that a heavy downpour would wash out some of the track, he left the train, told the telegraph operator that he was going to a hotel and to call him if he were needed during the night; this was about 6 P. M; and about 11 P. M. he was called, was told that the train he had left had not been heard from since 7 P. M. and that a scouting crew would soon arrive going to search for it. By 1 A. M. it had been found safely marooned on a stretch of track with the roadbed washed out on both sides of it and the telegraph wires down. When the train finally reached Washington Court House it was found that a cyclone had passed through the town demolishing many buildings, including the railroad station, blowing freight cars off the track and creating havoc generally. In the path of the cyclone and just beyond the limits of the town had stood a haystack; this had been blown into a nearby woods with such force that individual straws had been blown through branches one inch or more in diameter. With later experiences with cyclones at Louisville, Ky., and at St. Louis, Mo., your North Andover Boy began to feel that he was an expert in restoring damages done by them.

From the "Pony" division he advanced to Division Engineer of the Louisville division and then to the Pan Handle division— the latter being the most important division of the Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh—. In 1889 while on the latter the Johnstown flood occurred—a catastrophe that laid waste the towns of Connemaugh and Johnstown, obliterated many miles of four-track railroad and caused the death of 2300 people. The valley of the Connemaugh River was from a half to three-quarters of a mile wide. The flood coming down this valley presented a solid wall front 20 feet high composed of trees and debris of all sorts. Only one building in those two towns within the limits of the valley withstood the onslaught of the flood; that was the brick schoolhouse where many took refuge, and which served the purposes of the morgue, relief headquarters and other activities. The first railroad men to reach the devastated towns were 400 of the narrator's men—bridgemen, trackmen, buildingmen and others who could help in the restoration. They worked their way in from the west. Those from the east arrived a day or two later. The tracks at the location of the Stone Bridge located near the western limit of Johnstown are about 30 feet above the bed of the Connemaugh River. On top of this bridge, debris consisting of trees, parts of houses, shops and buildings of all kinds, was piled 40 feet high, making a total of 70 feet, and against one of the piers an engine was found that had been brought down stream by the flood from an engine-house more than a mile away. There were twelve engines in this house before the flood struck it, but the house and the engines were so completely removed and obliterated that a survey had to be made to relocate it. It took two weeks of most strenuous work to get enough of the railroad restored so the trains could run. From four A. M. until 11 P. M. on the job, then an hour around a table discussing the work done during the day and planning that for the next. Such was the daily routine during those two weeks. There were thousands of railroad men at work there, having been brought from all points as far east as New York and as far west as Chicago and St. Louis.

There is no place where the saying that "Eternal vigilance is the price of safety" is more aptly applicable than on a railroad, and the Division Engineer must be a watchful man. He is subject to call at any hour of the day or night; he has under his jurisdiction the upkeep or maintenance of tracks, bridges, buildings, tunnels, fuel and water stations; he must ever be alert and must know that his men are industrious, capable and loyal, for safety must be maintained at all hazards. All phases of engineering are encountered in such a position. One who is unable or unwilling to stand long hours, intensive application and irregular times for meals or rest should seek an engineering position somewhere else than on a railroad; your North Andover Boy has had his share.

About the middle of June, 1890, as was his custom when he had been out on the road, his chief clerk met him on a train some 40 or 50 miles from headquarters with correspondence and mail; one day he seemed a little excited and quickly handed the North Andover Boy a letter which read: "I hereby offer you the position of Assistant Chief Engineer of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway at a salary of $2,000 per year. Let me know if you accept and when you will report for duty." The letter was read and placed with the other correspondence without comment. A quarter of an hour later the chief clerk could restrain himself no longer and said: "Great Scott, Mr. Kittredge, what are you going to do about that letter!" The reply given him was, "Sometime when I shall have made out the signature of the writer, and when I shall have found out where and what the railroad is, and what the prospects are beyond the position offered, then I will answer it." He could not help giving expression to his incomprehension by saying: "Well, I'll be darned!" A week or ten days later on a street in Cincinnati the North Andover Boy met a man whom he knew to be connected with the C.C.C. and St. L. Railway and asked him what kind of a man the Chief Engineer of that road was. For it was the Chief Engineer's signature on the offer which could not be deciphered. The reply was; "He has just completed the most expensive engine house on the entire road, and we cannot get the engines into it." A telegraph office was sought and the following despatch sent: "Offer accepted; will report for duty July 1st."

So ended a ten year service with the Pennsylvania—then, undoubtedly the foremost railroad in the country so far as scientific, intelligent and progressive construction, maintenance and operation were concerned—ten years of good service that are viewed even today as years well spent, for they brought to the narrator a wealth of varied experiences, a host of warm friends with whom he still fraternizes in a congenial way and the feeling that he would be cordially greeted either from the viewpoint of his work or from that of his personal contact if and when he should meet any of those with whom he had had dealings of any kind or nature.

It was not until years after that he learned how the new position came to be offered to him. Then he was told that the General Manager of the C.C.C. and St.L. had decided that the then Chief Engineer, who had been sick and off duty a good deal, should have a successor in training, and had asked the General Manager of the Pennsylvania if he could recommend some one. Your North Andover Boy was named. One year from the date of taking service there, he was Chief Engineer of that road 2000 miles in length, running east and west and north and south, through Ohio, Indiana and Illinois with extensions into Michigan, Kentucky and Missouri. It was at a time when railroad activity was very great, and when other roads were beginning to follow the lead of the Pennsylvania in the introduction of modern up-to-date methods. Under these circumstances, and in following a man who, of late years, had not been popular either as an individual or as a planner of large improvements, your North Andover Boy would indeed have been subject to censure if he had not been able to make a comparatively good showing.

In that position during the next fifteen years he practically rebuilt the entire road; double-tracked a large portion of it; replaced wooden bridges with permanent ones of stone and steel; cut down hills and filled up valleys to enable longer and heavier trains to be moved at increased speed; and built several stretches of new railroad to shorten distance and to reduce gredients and curvature. One of the most interesting of the last was a stretch of 44 miles of double-track line into St. Louis to take care of World's Fair business; usually new tracks are opened for trains to run at speed of 20 to 30 miles per hour, then gradually increased as the tracks become seasoned; but this particular piece of railroad was so constructed that the first train that ran over it covered the 44 miles in 43 minutes; it was fun to stand by the side of the track and see the train pass. Time does not permit the giving of details of the work crowded into those fifteen years; suffice it to say that those years, like the former ones, were busy ones; there were always just ahead so many problems to be worked out, and the varieties of them were so numerous that there was no chance for monotony—each one presented phases peculiar to itself so that one's interest was kept keenly active at all times. They were eventful and happy years.

One day in March 1906, your North Andover Boy was in his office when at 7.30 A. M. his telephone rang; the General Manager was at the other end of the line and said: "I'm glad to find one man on his job. Are you busy?" The reply was: "Always busy, but with plenty of time for you if you want me." At the General Manager's office was a letter from the General Manager of the New York Central saying: "I want your Chief Engineer to be Chief Engineer of the New York Central. When can he come?" A thunderbolt out of a clear sky!

If the last 25 years had called for intensive application, the move to New York did not lessen it. The construction of the Grand Central Terminal was just starting; the electrification of the tracks out of New York had been ordered by the Public Service Commission; the freight situation on the west side of New York—known as the West Side Improvement—was very acute; Buffalo was a bottleneck where passenger and freight trains were always in each other's way, and where through-passenger trains backed in or out of an outgrown and congested station.

Rochester had antiquated passenger and freight facilities—or rather lack of facilities—Syracuse was clamoring for the removal of the railroad from Washington Street where for two or three miles trains vied with automobiles for the occupancy of the street; Utica was up in arms over grade crossing conditions; at Schenectady the passenger tracks were down in a hole so that trains frequently were stalled; Albany was almost impossible from a freight operating view point; the railroad from Albany to New York (mostly a two track line with 100 passenger trains daily besides the milk trains, the express trains, the mail trains and the freight trains) was a nightmare to those who tried to maintain schedules; the necessity for reducing gredients from Buffalo to the Seaboard was apparent; and the need for increased and improved water supply was general over the entire road. The expenditure to bring about the corrections of the above items amounted to sums varying from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 per year and before he severed his active connection with the road he had the satisfaction of seeing most of them completed after his own designs or plans and under his own direction.

He would like to talk on nearly all the above, but he will single out three as perhaps the most outstanding in many respects—the Castleton Cut-Off, the Grand Central Terminal, and the West Side Improvement. The Castleton Cut-Off was built to relieve the freight situation at Albany. The President of the New York Central one day called your narrator into his office and with a wave of his hand — and a little profanity — said: "Find the best line around Albany!" That was the only specification he received. At the end of three and a half years he turned over to the operating department 24 miles of new double-track railroad route that cost $25,000,000. Within this 24 miles there was a bridge across the Hudson River a mile long near Castleton—hence the name Castleton Cut-Off; there was a modern up-to-date yard with 100 miles of track in it; there were "humps" for breaking up and sorting freight trains; and every modern device applicable for the expeditious handling of freight. Whereas cars took from 24 to 72 hours to pass through the old Albany yard, and where all westbound freight trains had to be cut into parts not exceeding 51 cars, and then pulled and pushed up the Albany hill, now trains of 135 cars weighing 9000 tons pull into and out of the new yard. Trains are received, sorted, and dispatched at times varying from 30 minutes to 1 hour and 30 minutes, and no one now hears of Albany yard delays, for there are none.

About $1,000,000 worth of equipment and 5000 men were employed at top speed both day and night on this work, which brought into play all the engineering acumen and resourcefulness of your narrator and his assistants. Because of the magnitude of the facilities crowded into the comparatively short distance, the speed of construction, the problems in foundations, in excavations, and other emergency matters met with, this work was visited from time to time by notables from all over the country and by many from abroad. The reduced cost of operation, the number of engines released from pusher and switching service, and the great number of cars made available because they are not tied up, as formerly, justify the expenditures made, and make life worth living in that vicinity.

The Grand Central Terminal into which the first electric train ran in 1908; the main station dedicated on Feb. 1st, 1913—(by the way, how many of you who have seen it, realize that the portion of the heavens depicted upon the ceiling of the Concourse represents the sky over New York as it was on the day of dedication?). An able astronomer by studying that ceiling could tell by the position of the stars and constellations the date of the dedication even if the records were lost.—The development of the railroad's property adjacent to the Terminal, and of the "Up-Air rights" over the tracks and platforms all came under the supervision of your North Andover Boy. Here was an old terminal that, like Topsy, "just growed," with short tracks filling all the available land space, which was to be converted into a large double-deck terminal with about 70 acres of track and platform space. In the old station were about 14 tracks. In the new station there are 48 platform tracks besides tracks for standing equipment, and other storage. The change from the old to the new had to be accomplished without interference with the regular running of trains which was a real problem when it is known that the number of train movements varied from a minimum of about 300 daily to a maximum of 600, and all station tracks converged just above 50th Street into four tracks. But the work was done without delaying any train more than 15 minutes and very few of them for that length of time.

A word about the "Up-Air rights." The first plans made for the development of the property provided for open spaces over the tracks within the blocks, bordered with a low granite wall, and ornamental iron fence. It was, however, early recognized that this would mean economic waste, so it was decided that buildings six stories in height should be erected. Two such were built, and then the limit was raised to twelve stories. Two of these were built, and after that, the sky was the limit. The last building erected over the tracks is 34 stories. Up-Air rights is the term applied to what the railroad disposes of over and above its tracks. The railroad retains ownership in the land and in the space up to the street level; the upper level tracks are 25 feet below the street level, and the lower tracks 50 feet below. Above the street level, the right to erect buildings is leased for 21 years with the privilege of two renewals of 21 years each, but upon the revaluation of the property and re-adjustment of the rent. The railroad company passes upon the use to be made of the property leased, the appearance of the structures and their strength, and if they are over live tracks,—as most of them are—the railroad lets the contracts and supervises the erection. When the Biltmore Hotel secured the Up-Air rights in the block bounded by Madison Ave. and Vanderbilt Ave., 43rd and 44th Streets, it was planned to put up a hotel building with 1000 rooms that should cost about $5,000,000. The work of erection was let upon a basis of cost slightly below the estimate, but with a bonus and penalty clause; $1000 bonus for every day before a certain fixed date of completion, and $1000 penalty for each day later than that fixed date. The contract was awarded Feb. 1st, 1912. The first steel was set in place May 1st, 1912, and 2500 people partook of meals in the building on New Year's Eve, 1912. There had been as many as 2500 men working at one time on it, and the contractor received $65,000 bonus. He said afterwards that that sum represented his entire profit. The rental for that block was $100,000 per year for the Up-Air rights. In all, about 32 city blocks are now occupied by similar high-class buildings. Over $100,000,000 has been spent by the railroad in this terminal area. It has converted a smoky, dingy, unattractive territory into a dignified, handsome, and inspiring civic center, now about the most highly valued property in the City of New York. Volumes could be written about this subject.

During the last two years of his activity on the railroad, he devoted a great deal of his time to the West Side Improvement. This bears much the same relation to freight business in New York City that the Grand Central Terminal does to passenger service. From a railroad standpoint, freight traffic is more of a money earner than passenger, but it is not so much in the public eye. The improvements there planned, when completed, will have cost the City and the New York Central $175,000,000, and will revolutionize freight handling and street activities. The freight facilities on the West Side were antiquated. The freight-house at Manhattanville was the same that was erected sixty years before when there were only a few thousand people tributary to it. Now there were 400,000 people tributary to it. The tracks from 60th Street to Canal Street were in the center of the streets traversed, and over a part of the route, a man or boy on horseback galloped in front of the train ringing a bell to warn the public of its approach. Use of the tracks was limited to certain hours, and altogether conditions were bad for both railroad and city. For more than twenty years, those improvements and plans had been the causes of endless controversy, of intense feeling, and even of political upheaval in the city.

Under the new plan, modern freight houses will be constructed, the tracks will be taken off the surface of the streets, and either carried overhead, or put below. The streets occupied by tracks will have unrestricted possession by vehicles and pedestrians, and there will be an elevated express highway for automobile traffic from Canal Street to Spuyten Duyvil, where speed of 40 miles an hour will be considered normal.

An Engineering Committee of six appointed at the request of the Mayor of the City of New York had been at work developing these improvements for a year and a half. Practically all of the drawings and all of the planning were executed in your narrator's office where 20 to 30 men were constantly employed under his direction. If it were generally known that the plans were those of the New York Central there would have been violent opposition to them; hence the drawings were completed except for the titles; these were omitted, the plans sent to the City's office, the titles were put on, and the plans went out as the City's plans; the City officials proclaimed them and took credit for them, and the Public accepted them. On the day before he retired the Committee signed the plans which are now being carried out. Your North Andover Boy can not help feeling that he made a personal contribution to this Improvement which is one of great value to the City and Railroad.

For two years during the World War, he was one of three members of the Budget Committee for the Director General of Railroads, that passed upon improvements authorized to cost $500,000,000.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. To what forms of recreation or to what hobbies did your Boy turn when he felt the burdens of his position were weighing too heavily upon him. For more than thirty years he has bred and raced homing pigeons, those wonderful birds whose intelligence and behavior win the admiration of all who really know them. He had one bird that in 1903 beat the World's record in a flight of 1,000 miles. Another of his birds carried the first message from the front line trenches in France back to General Edward's headquarters. He contributed 60 birds to the service during the World War.

He has always maintained his attachment to things of a farm. He keeps a few chickens, has not bought an egg for about three years, fattens a few turkeys every Fall and Winter, and cultivates a vegetable garden about 100 feet square. His city lot is 150 by 350, and all work on it in connection with the above is done by himself.

Do you ask how such progress in the profession has been made? Was it due to "influence"? Was it due to "pull"? No! The man who offered him his first position on the Pennsylvania Railroad was scarcely known to him. It has ever been his belief that if a man likes his work and is enthusiastic about it and gives strict and conscientious devotion to his duty and shows honesty of purpose and action, he is bound to win out in the long run.

Since he retired, your North Andover Boy has been offered more work of a consulting nature than he would accept. He has no idle time. He still thinks this is a pretty good old world in which to live, and that if one is imbued with the right ideals, the right spirit and the right energy, he will succeed. By success is not meant financial affluence, but ability to acquire enough to live moderately, comfortably and modestly, to feel at peace with the World, and to enjoy life for the sake of living. Abundant reward will come from the satisfaction of having given freely the best that is in one, and the contemplation of good work conscientiously performed.

Your North Andover Boy, George W. Kittredge.

229. VIII. Joseph Kittredge, M. D. (Joseph, Joseph, Thomas, John, John, John, John), born May 21, 1858, in North Andover, Mass. Graduated from the Harvard Medical School in 1879, and practiced medicine in Marblehead, Mass., and in Brookline, Mass., until 1918, when he retired to the ancestral home in North Andover. There he established a small Sanitarium, managed the farm, and enjoyed a herd of Holstein cattle. Married Mabel Thorndike Hodges, Oct. 31, 1889, in South Orange, N. J. The following obituary was published in the New York Tribune, Mar. 29, 1903:

"News received from Boston of the death of Anson O. Kittredge, president of the Accountant, Audit, and Assurance Co., and professor of theoretical and practical accounting in the School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance of New York University, and one of the founders of the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants. It was largely through his influence that the present state law was adopted making the Regents degree of C.P.A. so highly coveted. Some of the most prominent industrial combinations bear marks of his organizing ability. At one time he was editor of "The Iron Age" and the "Metal Worker." He personally conducted "Metal," "Business," "The Lawyer and the Credit Man," and "Commerce, Accounts, and Finance."

234. VIII. ARTHUR M. KITTREDGE (Oliver, Oliver, Jacob, Joseph, John, John, John), born 1854 in Dayton, Ohio. Married Mary J. Broadwell in 1874.

Children

2 Arthur Lindon, b Jan. 16, 1880, d 1907, m Georgianna Lindley in 1903. They had two children: Thomas, b 1903; Mary H., b 1907.
3 Mary, b 1883.
4 Helen, b 1886.

The following account was taken from the Boston Herald of Nov. 28, 1909.

"Go to Dayton, O., and ask almost any man this side of middle age that you chance to meet on the street if he knows Arthur Kittredge, and in all likelihood he will reply: 'Kittredge! Sure I know him. Why, he used to go from door to door with his little tinsmith's forge and his soldering iron, prepared to mend a leaky leader or a leaky pail.' What's he doing today? 'Oh, he's the head of a big car works—one of the biggest in the West,' they say."

All of which is true; and it is also true that while young Kittredge was an itinerant tinsmith his ambition was to have a tinshop of his own some day. But while he was dreaming this dream he unexpectedly received an offer from a man who admired his industry to go upon the road as a salesman of stoves. The sum of money dangled before his eyes was so alluring that Kittredge straightway forgot his early ambition, and put aside his hand forge for a salesman's gripsack. In time he developed into the stove company's best road man, then the car company acquired him, and then he acquired the car company, good proof of this accomplishment lying in the fact that he is now its president and a man of large wealth.

240. VIII. FRANK KIDDER KITTREDGE (J. Kidder, Jeremiah, Samuel, James, James, John, John), born Nov. 21, 1852, died July 14, 1930. Married Abbie Cheney, daughter of D. H. Cheney of Wells River, Vt., May 27, 1891. They lived in Woodsville, N. H.

Child

1 Pauline. A trained nurse in Boston, Mass.

A newspaper of Woodsville, N. H., gives this account of Frank Kidder Kittredge. After giving the date of his birth and death, it says that he lost his father when he was ten years old, and goes on as follows:

"He attended the schools at Danville, Vt., as long as circumstances permitted. At the age of twenty-one he went to Manchester, N. H., where he learned the jeweler's trade. In 1875 he bought the store of E. Perry at Danville for the sum of $20. Mr. Kittredge did an active and ever increasing business in that village until the fire there in May 1889 at which time he lost his store and fixtures as well as several valuable horses of which he was the owner, thus his entire savings were practically wiped out.

In June 1889 he came to Woodsville and bought another jewelry business. From that year until he retired, he had an ever increasing and lucrative trade. He however was not content to be idle and after his retirement did a great deal of repair work at his own home. He not only repaired clocks and watches but several very attractive clocks in his late home are entirely the work of his own hands."

Another paper gives a different account:

"In the death of F. K. Kittredge, at his home at Woodsville, N. H., at the age of 77, one of the best known horsemen in Northern New Hampshire and Vermont passed away. Some 20 or 30 years ago he competed at nearly all the fairs. He was a familiar figure, owning and driving different horses, the most popular ones being Diavolo, Ned Cole, and Alcy Wilkes.

"Kit," as he was familiarly known, was an idol of the grandstand, always playing a lone hand, and driving to win. About 1898 he bought and raced Diavolo for two years, giving him a record of 2:12½ on a half-mile track. Mr. Kittredge was always his own caretaker. At one time, he drove Diavolo more than 100 miles over the country roads and won three five-heat races in two weeks."

241. VIII. David Kittredge (David Osgood, David, Samuel, James, James, John, John), born Mar. 18, 1854. Married Catherine E. Richardson, Mar. 22, 1877.

Distinction of being the first woman doctor appointed a medical examiner by the aeronautical division of the United States Department of Commerce was claimed yesterday by Dr. Emma Kittredge, chief anesthetist at the California Lutheran Hospital.

Dr. Kittredge's appointment by Dr. R. E. Whitehead, medical director of the aeronautical division, as chief medical examiner for the Southern California area, was made in recognition of her research work to determine what effect, if any, flying has on a woman's nervous system.

Periodic physical examinations, Dr. Kittredge said, will be made of all women pilots as well as applicants for license to fly.

The attractive young doctor recently obtained a student's pilot license and hopes to complete her flying course within a few weeks. She is Flight Surgeon of the Women's Air Corps No. 1.

Appointment as women's medical examiner also carries with it a commission as lieutenant in the Reserve Corps and Dr. Kittredge will wear her swanky new uniform for the first time next Monday when she participates in aerial maneuvers with the Women's Air Reserve Corps at Metropolitan Airport.

Dr. Kittredge, who is a graduate of the Women's Medical College in Philadelphia, served her interneship at the Los Angeles General Hospital.

Professor Kittredge retired from active work at Harvard in June 1936, and the following article was published in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin February 14th of that year:

No common mode of utterance will do to express what Harvard graduates feel at the announcement that Professor Kittredge is to retire at the end of the present academic year. To think of his courses on Shakespeare as finite, as reaching a termination, is itself difficult. Kittredge's voice no longer to be heard at the accustomed hour, interpreting, distinguishing, giving scholarship an edge of wit, controlling and retrenching ambitious speculation by strong sense? It does not seem possible. To attempt to pay suitable tribute is to wish for a fresh turn of language, ". . . new, And undebased by praise of meaner things."

There will be many informed and enthusiastic acknowledgments of Professor Kittredge's contributions to scholarship. The astounding range, the sensitive responsibility of his learning, will be recognized and itemized. These accomplishments are tangible, and may be tangibly recorded. It is perhaps harder to put into words what students of Kittredge will wish to see put into words. Dr. Johnson remarked that the rights of kings and governments sink into questions of grammar when grammarians discuss them. It is true also that questions of emendation, questions of usage, rise into philosophy when a philosopher discusses them, and take on humanity when a human being discusses them. Professor Kittredge has been a great teacher in a way which meets the one essential demand upon education. He made us think. He made us discriminate and use language accurately. He insinuated into us the instinct of logic, the delight in clearness.

And this clearness of mind was united in him with humor and an understanding of human nature. The moments in Professor Kittredge's class were moments of philosophy. The questions he discussed rose into ultimates; they were questions, in the fullest sense, of the understanding.

The fame of the teacher is evanescent. His contributions to scholarship remain, but his presence in the classroom vanishes irrecoverably, like the voice and motion of the actor who excited a generation past. But Professor Kittredge will have a corner in renown of a more lasting kind. He has written pages which readers of books will not forget, and in such pages the effluence of the individual man survives. There is a great gulf fixed between the competent academic writer, the professorial stylist, even the finest of his tribe, and the writer who is the reason why professors exist. Professor Kittredge is more than a professorial writer of unusual wit and charm; he has now and again contributed to one of the great arts of civilization—the art of prose. Witness his essay, "Shakespeare"; witness his tribute to Dean Briggs, with its exquisite union of strictest form and purest feeling.

When Olympians leave us, we can only wish that we might suddenly become Olympians too, so that we might give the tribute best worth winning—the tribute of one's peers.

From the New York Times:

Professor George Lyman Kittredge, a colorful figure who came to be an institution at Harvard University in the past half century, passed into the ranks of Harvard's retired scholars today.

A thunderous burst of applause from some 300 standing students bade him a dramatic farewell as he finished his last classroom lecture. There was no Harvard indifference as undergraduates said good-bye to "Kitty," as he is affectionately known.

Professor Kittredge himself indicated in no way that it was his last college lecture. Today's lecture had the same sardonic tinge that brings grins to old Harvard graduates as they look back to the days they studied English 2 under Professor Kittredge.

Long before 10 o'clock, the starting time for the Kittredge lecture, Room 6 in Harvard Hall was jammed. Students sought vantage points at windows and on stairs and milled in the corridor.

At exactly 10 o'clock the familiar gray-clad, trim figure of Professor Kittredge mounted the stairs with the same steady measured tread. Through the packed corridor he passed as if no one were in sight.

Walking to the lecture platform resumed his lecture on "Winter's Tale" at the point where he had stopped Wednesday.

There was loud shuffling at the rear of the room as more students tried to crowd into the room. Professor Kittredge glared. Students were apprehensive. For less reason "Kitty" had stamped out of a classroom.

"I want this room quiet," he shouted today. "Shut the door." The door could not be shut. Too many students were jammed into it.

"Go away," the professor commanded. "Go away or keep quiet. There must be quiet in this room."

The noise lessened but did not cease completely.

"Hold your peaces," Professor Kittredge ordered.

But this time there was the faintest suspicion of a smile in his eyes and a ripple of laughter ran over the room.

"That's Shakespeare," he explained, "and that's good English."

"We can't finish the play today," he said later, "but you have notes. You can finish it yourselves. Of course they aren't as good notes as I could give you, but they'll do."

A second before 11 o'clock he stopped.

"We'll stop here," he remarked in a casual manner. There was a pause for a moment. Then a thunder of applause.

Professor Kittredge stood poised on the edge of the platform for a minute or two. Then he motioned with his hand to clear the aisle. He passed down the hall and went unhurried out into the college yard.

He was the Principal of the High School at Westfield, Mass., for forty years. Married Mabel Marion Thatcher, July 14, 1885, in Brandon, Vt. She was born Mar. 21, 1858, and died in January, 1931.

Children

1 Russell Oyer, b Oct. 12, 1886.
2 Helen.

264. VIII. ALFRED BEARD KITTREDGE (Russell Herbert, Herbert, Joshua, Thomas, Thomas, James, John) born Mar. 28, 1861, at Nelson, N. H.; d May 4, 1911, at Hot Springs, Ark. Never married. (From Who's Who in South Dakota.)

"The President" said Senator Kittredge—and nothing more—as he introduced President Roosevelt, a few years since to a large out-door audience that had gathered in Sioux Falls to hear him speak. This is the shortest public speech introductory or otherwise, on record. This style of speaking is characteristic of "Kit". He is the briefest man on earth. Just so in trying a lawsuit, the Senator has little to say; yet we doubt if any man in the state has won so large a percentage of the cases he has tried.

Senator Kittredge is distinctly a self-made man. To begin with he was only a poor farmer's son in Cheshire County, New Hampshire. His early education was acquired in the rural schools of his native state. A private tutor prepared him for Yale, which he entered in June 1878. Young Kittredge was twenty-four years of age when he had finished his education. Thrilled with the inspiration of "Young man, go west, and grow up with the country" he at once struck for South Dakota. At that time the territory had not been divided. It was a vast empire carved from what was geographically known as "The Great American Desert."

Settling in Sioux Falls, he stuck out his shingle. Long years ago, he pulled down this sign,—his whereabouts were known; his record as an attorney had been made. From this time on we see him climbing the political ladder. Politics were his natural choice; he couldn't keep out. Possessed of all the sturdy instincts of a natural born leader, he soon forged his way to the front.

In 1888 he was made chairman of the Minnehaha county republican committee. Later he was state senator from that county for two terms. His ability commanded attention and respect. He was appointed United States senator by the Governor to fill a vacancy for two years, when the former senator died, and then at the hands of the state legislature in 1903, he was given the united and complete support of the republican party and unanimously elected by them to succeed himself in the senate for six years longer.

Kittredge's ascendency to the United States senate, soon won for him recognition as a man of great brain power and a tireless worker. His early appointment to a position on the judiciary committee bore prima facie evidence that he was at once regarded at Washington as an able constitutional lawyer. Likewise, his immediate selection for a place on the Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals, awakened to him the opportunity of a life-time. Quietly, meditatingly, manfully, Mr. Kittredge went to work, and the pulse of South Dakota was soon throbbing with the recognition which her junior senator was receiving at our national capitol.

But it was not until the senate called for the brief on the purchase of the Panama canal from the French company that Senator Kittredge's great legal ability excited public comment. Here was a young lawyer—a senator, if you please—from the "wild and woolly" west. The senate has in it some mighty clever legal talent. When the "bachelor senator" from South Dakota arose to make his report, all ears were at eager attention. It was an herculean proposition to draw up a brief on such a technical, complicated, international proposition. Not a word was struck out, not a syllable added. It was perfect; and it will be referred to as authority by coming generations when Senator Kittredge has embarked for another world—lo! these hundred years.

Largely on account of his silent nature, Senator Kittredge has never been properly understood, except by his nearest associates. He is a man of great poise. Regardless of what the future may bring forth, he will remain a great character in the history of the state, and be revered and admired by his many friends whom he never betrayed. May we never cease to love him!

A marble bust of Senator Kittredge was presented to the state of South Dakota by his friends, and was placed in the rotunda of the capitol at Pierre. Fully 1000 people were present at the unveiling, which was preceded by impressive exercises held in the House of Representatives, when lofty tributes were paid to the memory of the distinguished statesman. The bust was unveiled by Russell D. Kittredge, a nephew of the senator.

Children

1 Charles Marble, Jr., b Oct. 21, 1886.
2 Cornelius Van Ness, b June 4, 1908.

In Excelsis

Rest, weary soul, from thy labors;
All worry in peacefulness ends
Where steadfast rocks are thy neighbors
And sentinel pines are thy friends;

Where the blue of the sky above us
Meets blue of the distance fair
And the thoughts of the few who love us
Are carried to us on the air.

As God's crowning act of creation
These hills He made at the last,
That the souls of men, near starvation,
Might, in their grandeur, break fast.
We have suffered—who has not, of us—
Our crosses were heavy to bear
Till we climbed to the heights above us
And our burdens became light as air.

Then why such striving and straining
To reach, through murk, to a star?
No whining or futile complaining
Can change God's truths as they are.
The mountains of God are still with us,
By climbing we know where we are,
For it's only the heights that can give us
A vision that penetrates far.
